HOLY CROSS
FAMILY MINISTRIES

Visual Identity Guidelines

Hello everyone! Thank you for joining us today.

My name is Emmanuel Epau and i am here with Victoria Hassan to discuss the Visual Identity Guidelines—a set of standards that will help all Holy Cross Family Ministries present a consistent, recognizable brand worldwide.

And this matters because when we use the same colors, fonts, and visual elements, people recognize HCFM immediately—whether they're in the France, Philippines, Chile, Bangladesh, or the United States.

So consistency will strengthen our identity and unify our ministries across regions and languages. Which ultimately, helps us communicate our mission more effectively.

Today, we will walk you through the meaning behind our symbol, our color palette, our typography, and practical guidelines you can apply immediately in your work.

This is The HCFM Circular Mark—the heart of our visual identity.

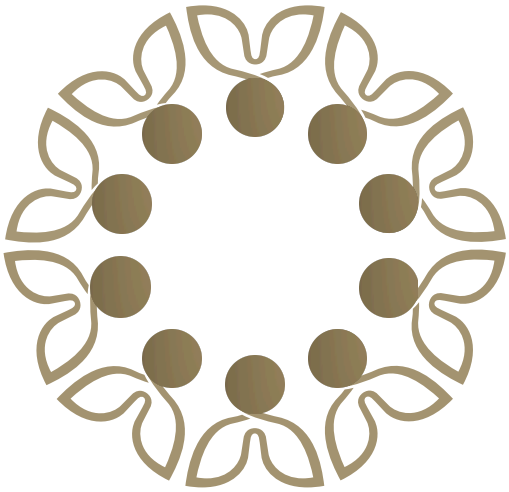

At its core, this Mark is built around the Rosary, the prayer that unites families across the world and the very foundation of our ministry.

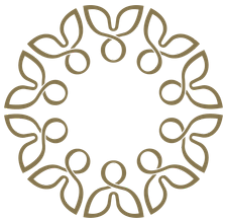

This circular shape immediately communicates:
unity,
continuity,
and gathering, with families coming together in prayer.

This Mark visually reflects Venerable Patrick Peyton's vision: families linked together through prayer, forming something greater than themselves.

As we go through the next few slides, I want you to look more closely at the elements within this symbol—because every detail carries meaning.

The 10 Beads of the Rosary

The design is focused on the unit of 10 beads of the Rosary, representing "totality" and "unity"—bringing the great variety of family members together in prayer.

Now, let's look deeper. As you can see, the 10 Beads of the Rosary.

The Mark is composed of 10 interconnected shapes. This is intentional. These 10 shapes reference the 10 beads of a Rosary decade.

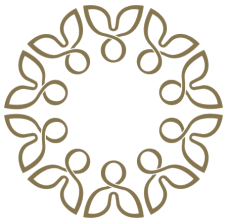

And the design represents "totality" and "unity"—bringing the great variety of family members together in prayer.

This points directly to the Rosary as the foundation of our ministry—the prayer that has united families around the world for generations.

And notice the circular arrangement. It reflects the continuous rhythm of prayer—a practice meant to be lived daily, not occasionally.

A Family of Prayer

The symbol grows out of this set of 10 beads, linked together as a family of prayer. Each bead symbolizes a family member in the position or "gesture" of prayer, each individual member contributing to the whole.

Building on what we just discussed, let's look at A Family of Prayer.

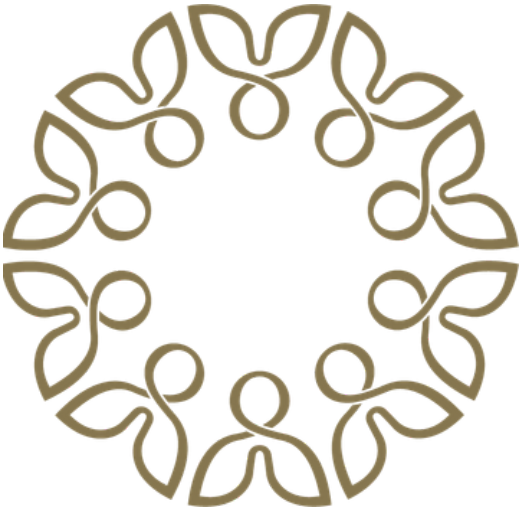

As you can see, each individual shape represents a person in prayer. And when you look closely—you can see the gesture of someone with hands raised or folded in prayer.

Together, these shapes form a united family. This slide reminds us that each bead symbolizes a family member in the position or "gesture" of prayer, with each individual member contributing to the whole.Emphasizing that prayer is both personal and communal.

Notice that no single shape stands alone—each depends on the others. This symbolizes how family prayer strengthens relationships and faith.
And reflects Father Patrick Peyton's conviction—one you've heard many times: "The Family That Prays Together Stays Together."

Welcome and Invitation

By design, the symbol radiates and reaches outward, giving a sense of welcome and invitation. The careful delineation of form and space also suggests the sense of mystery that is associated with the work of the Holy Spirit.

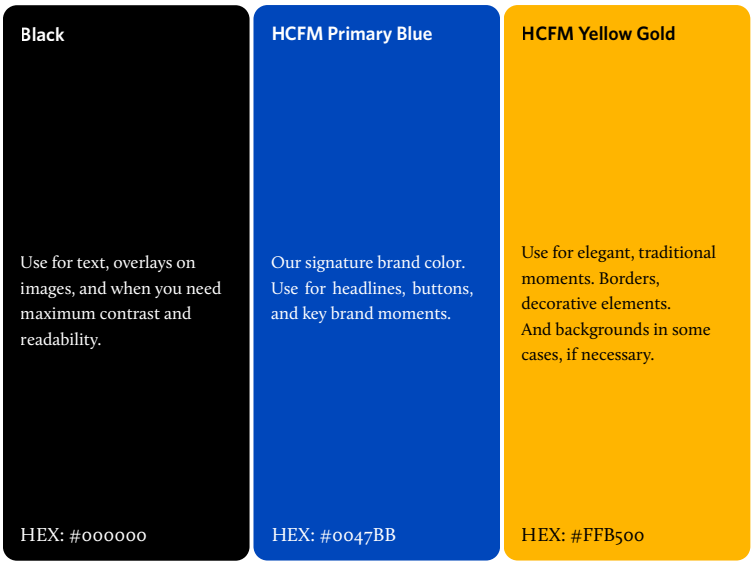

Now looking at the symbol again, by design, it radiates outward—creating a sense of openness rather than enclosure.

This outward movement gives a sense of welcome and invitation. The careful delineation of form and space also suggests the sense of mystery associated with the work of the Holy Spirit.

This communicates that HCFM is not inward-facing. We are mission-driven—actively reaching out to families across cultures and communities.
This is an open call for families everywhere to join in prayer.

I will let Victoria talk about our colors and Typography in detail.

Primary Color Palette

Color is one of the fastest ways people recognize our brand.

A consistent palette helps HCFM build brand recognition and consistency across cultures and lang uages.

Our Primary Colors should appear most often and form the foundation of all designs.

Black conveys a sense of strength and clarity for the brand.

It also provides strong contrast for readability, especially in text-heavy designs; and grounds the palette and keeps designs from feeling overly decorative.

Our HCFM Blue has strong associations with the Blessed Mother. It is the signature color of our brand. It is often used for backgrounds, headlines, and key brand moments.

HCFM Yellow Gold is now a primary brand color, playing a central role in our visual identity. Yellow Gold reflects the warmth of faith and the joy that flows from family prayer.

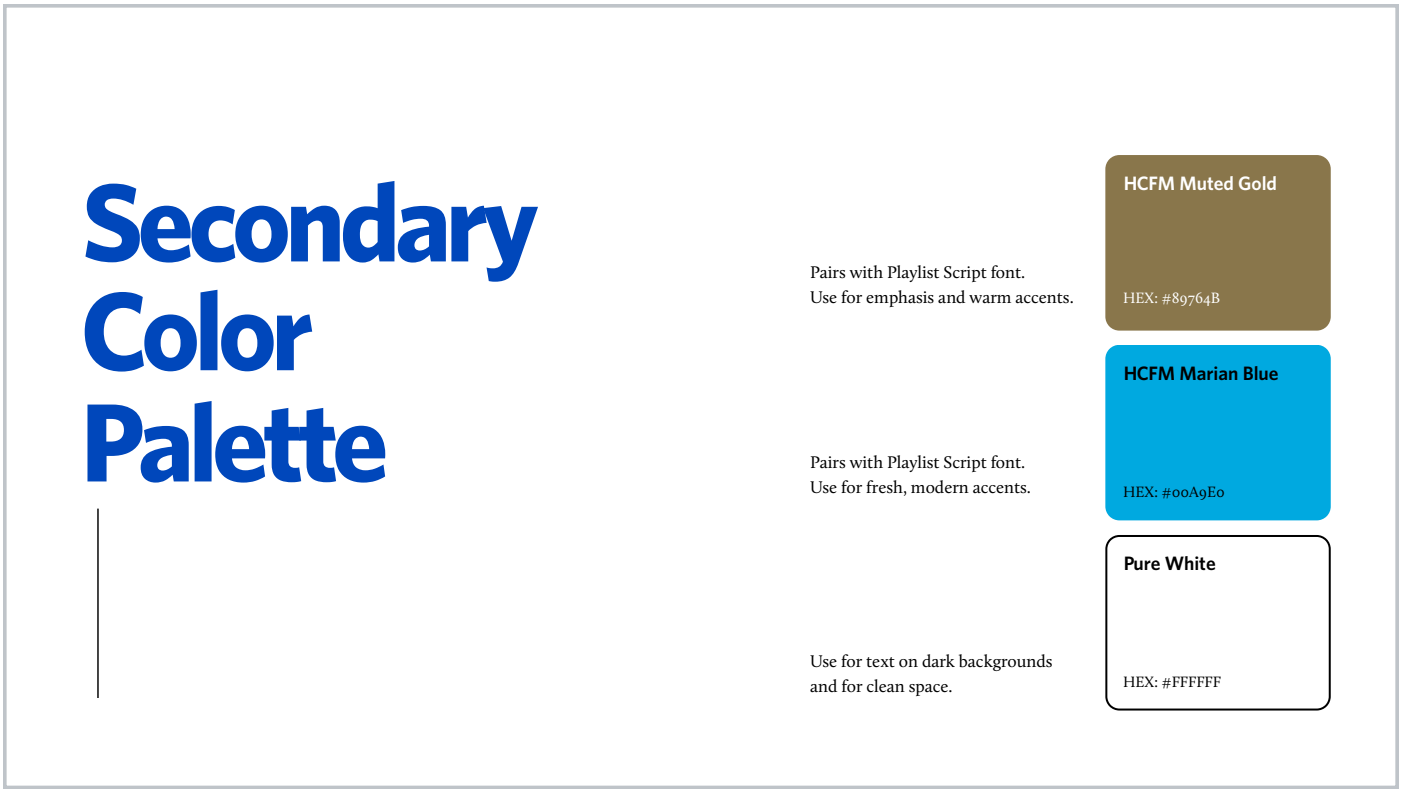

It may be used for:
- Headlines or key phrases
- Buttons and calls to action
- Accents within illustrations and graphics

Works especially well when paired with:
- HCFM Blue for balance and contrast
- Black or White for clarity and readability

Use Yellow Gold with intention to guide the viewer's eye. It provides balance with darker tones to maintain readability and visual hierarchy.

Avoid using Yellow Gold for long blocks of body text.

Also, avoid combining it with too many other strong colors in the same design.

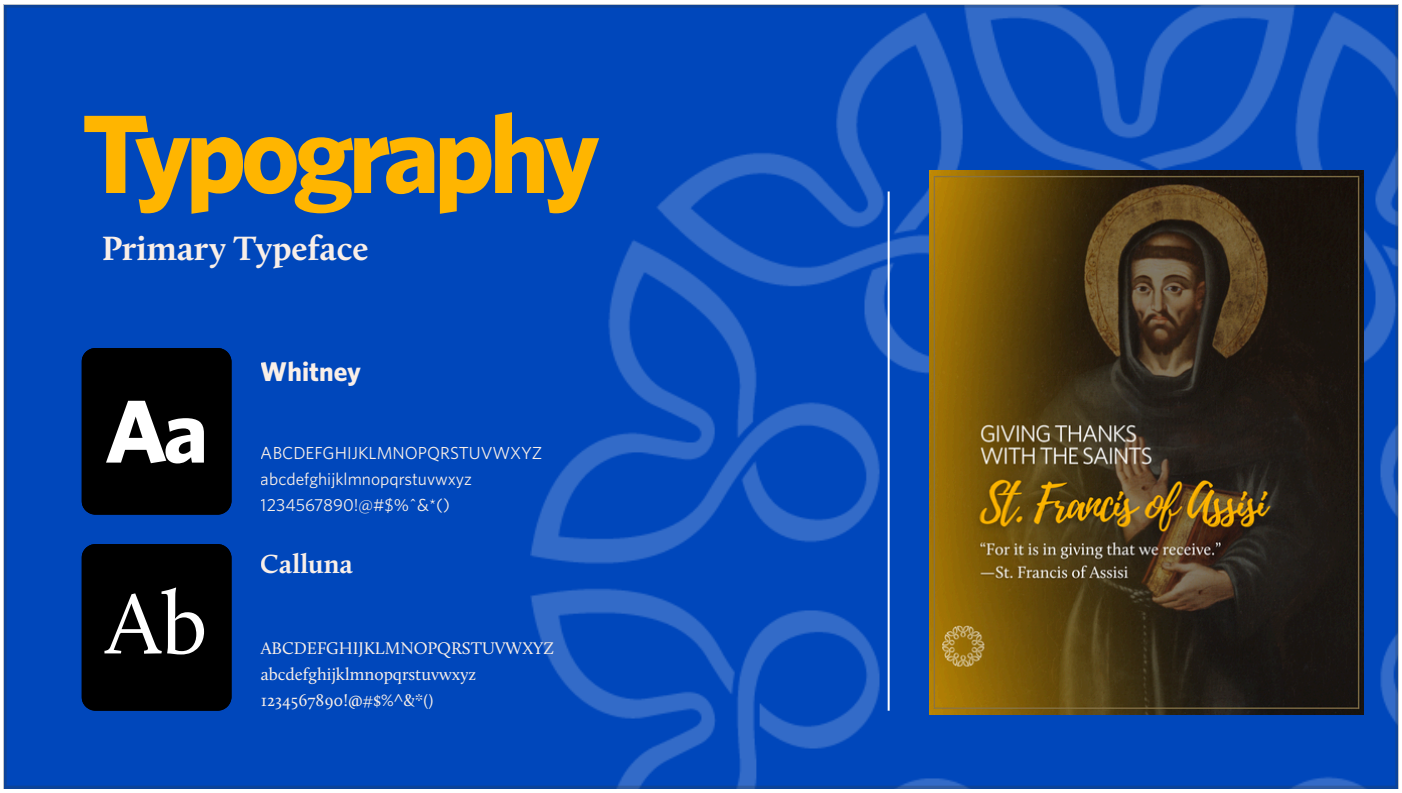

Our Secondary Colors exist to accent and support—not compete with—the primary palette.

They should be used sparingly for calls to action, highlights, or emphasis.

Our HCFM Muted Gold symbolizes sacredness, light. This color is typically used for borders and other decorative elements in a more traditional and reverent setting. The Muted Gold can be used as backgrounds in some cases, if necessary, but it should be kept in mind that this color does not always provide a readable canvas for text. White text is recommended for these cases.

HCFM Marian Blue is a secondary brand color used to support and enhance our primary palette. It is closely associated with Mary, reflecting her presence, gentleness, and guidance within our mission. It is best used for: Accents and highlights; Decorative elements and borders; Paired with Playlist Script or for Call to Actions for gentle emphasis.

White is an essential supporting color in the HCFM palette. White provides visual rest and balance, allowing other brand colors and elements to stand out clearly. Ideal for: Text on dark backgrounds; Clean backgrounds for layouts and documents; and Negative space to improve readability and focus. White helps ensure strong contrast when pairing White with darker colors.

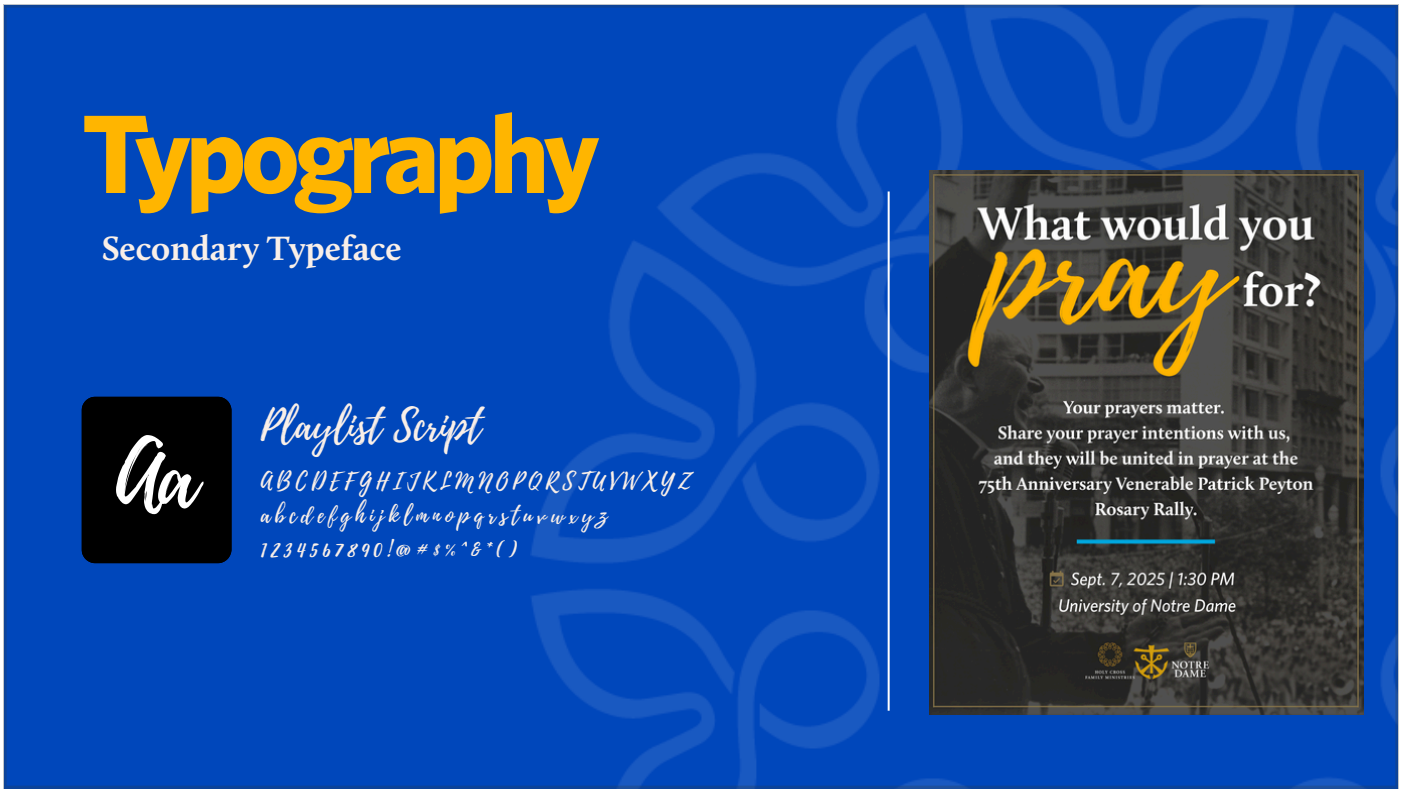

Whitney is our primary headline and display typeface.

It is clean, modern, and highly readable, making it ideal for:
- Headlines and titles
- Subheadings
- Short callouts or labels

Calluna is our primary body text typeface.

Its serif design reflects tradition, depth, and reflection, making it well suited for:
- Body copy and paragraphs
- Prayer text and reflections
- Longer-form reading

Playlist Script is a new font that has been added to our brand kit. It is a decorative, secondary typeface used to add warmth, elegance, and a human touch.

It is meant to accent, not replace, our primary typefaces.

It is meant to bring emotional emphasis without distracting from the message.

Best used for:
- A single word or short phrase
- Emphasis within a headline

Playlist Script should only appear in approved brand colors, most commonly:
- HCFM Yellow Gold
- White
- Marian Blue

Let's discuss Imagery Direction.

Our imagery really should clearly reflect who we are and what we stand for.

The images we choose tell the story of our mission and must convey:
faith,
family,
and prayer.

As you can see some of the approved imagery includes:

Venerable Patrick Peyton — our founder and spiritual guide

Ministry and culture-specific scenes — reflecting our global reach

Marian imagery — honoring our devotion to Mary

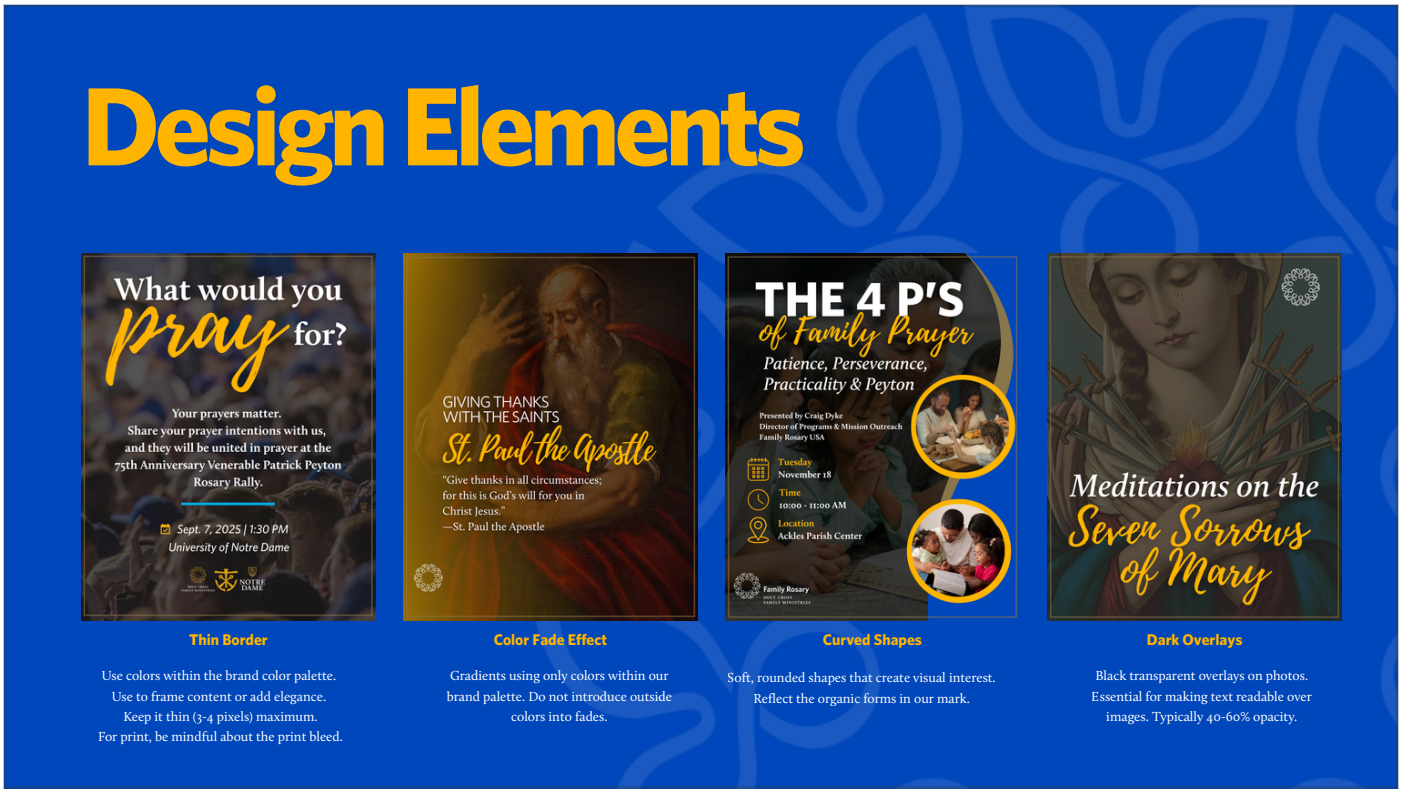

Families praying together —representing the heart of our mission

And the Rosary — as the heart of our prayer life.

So when selecting images, always ask yourself: Does this image reflect who we are and what we stand for?

Let me invite Victoria to talk more about the design elements.

Thin Borders
- Used to frame content or add subtle elegance.
- Must stay thin (3–4 pixels maximum).
- Always use approved brand colors, but most often in the Muted Gold

Color Fade Effects
- Gradients may be used only when they include approved brand colors. It is most often used in the HCFM Yellow Gold.
- Fades should be subtle and smooth.

Curved Shapes
- Soft, rounded shapes reflect the organic forms of the HCFM mark.
- Used to add visual interest without harsh lines.
- Should feel gentle, balanced, and intentional.

Dark Overlays
- Black transparent overlays placed over images.
- Best used when text appears on photos.
- Typical opacity range: 40–60% to ensure readability.

How to Use Design Elements Well
- Use only one or two elements per design.
- Prioritize readability and visual hierarchy.

- Do not use all design elements in a single design.

This slide summarizes our Do's and Don'ts, practical guidelines to keep our designs consistent and professional.

Let's start with the Do's.
Use black or white for most body text. It's always readable, and you never have to second-guess it .

Use dark overlays on photos when placing text over images. A black overlay at 40 to 60 percent opacity creates the contrast you need for readability.

And lastly use color fades and accents only within our brand palette.
If it's not an approved color, don't use it.
And always use the correct dimensions for each platform.

Now the Don'ts.
Don't use colors outside this palette. Even if a color looks appealing, consistency matters more than variety.

Don't use muted Gold for small areas of text like social media content. It's hard to read. Muted Gold is meant for accents, not paragraphs.

Don't mix all accent colors in one design. Pick one or two at most. Too many competing colors creates visual chaos.

And don't place light text on light backgrounds without sufficient contrast. If it's difficult to read, your audience won't read it.

These are simple guidelines, but following them consistently makes a real difference in how our brand is perceived.

This slide focuses on Playlist Script, our decorative secondary typeface.

It's elegant and adds warmth to a design. However, it's one that can be easily misused in our brand, so I want to be clear about how to use it well.

When to use it:
Use Playlist Script to emphasize a single word or short phrase for maximum impact.

Use it for stylistic, decorative moments—a saint's name, a key word in a quote, something you want to feel personal and warm.

When not to use it:
Don't use Playlist Script for full sentences or paragraphs. Script fonts become difficult to read very quickly with longer text.

Don't use it for body text. Your audience will lose patience and stop reading.

Don't use it at small sizes. The curves that make it beautiful also make it unreadable when scaled down. If you can't read it easily at arm's length, it's too small.

One more thing: Playlist Script pairs best with:
Yellow,

White,
and Marian Blue. Those combinations have been tested and work well.

The bottom line, is this:
a little Playlist Script goes a long way. Think of it as seasoning, it enhances the dish, but too much overwhelms it.

And that brings us to the end.

You'll receive a Brand Guidelines document later, that accompanies this presentation.

It covers everything in more detail, including platform dimensions and a quick reference checklist.

This is just the beginning of the conversation. We'll be sending updates from time to time to share additional guidance, answer common questions, and provide resources as needed.

If you have any questions in the meantime, please reach out to us. We're here to support you.

Thank you for your time and your commitment to this mission.

And that brings us to the end.

You'll receive a Brand Guidelines document later, that accompanies this presentation.

It covers everything in more detail, including platform dimensions and a quick reference checklist.

This is just the beginning of the conversation. We'll be sending updates from time to time to share additional guidance, answer common questions, and provide resources as needed.

If you have any questions in the meantime, please reach out to us. We're here to support you.

Thank you for your time and your commitment to this mission.

Hello everyone! Thank you for joining us today.

My name is Emmanuel Epau and i am here with Victoria Hassan to discuss the Visual Identity Guidelines—a set of standards that will help all Holy Cross Family Ministries present a consistent, recognizable brand worldwide.

And this matters because when we use the same colors, fonts, and visual elements, people recognize HCFM immediately—whether they're in the France, Philippines, Chile, Bangladesh, or the United States.

So consistency will strengthen our identity and unify our ministries across regions and languages. Which ultimately, helps us communicate our mission more effectively.

Today, we will walk you through the meaning behind our symbol, our color palette, our typography, and practical guidelines you can apply immediately in your work.